Mr. Chamberlain was bronzed, but he looked very thin and appeared to have aged considerably. He showed evident pleasure at the heartiness of the welcome.

NORFOLK MAN KILLED

The party entered carriages and drove through 'the thronged and decorated streets to Hartley Hall, the secene of so many previous functions connected with the South African war. There an address of wolcome was presented to Mr. Chamberlain, who, in the course of his reply, warned the country not to overestimate the results he had actually achieved. He was hopeful and even confident that the Dutch of South Africa would hereafter loyally take their place as members of the empire to which they now belonged, but it could not be expected that the long record of vacillation and weakness, which led to the war, would be wiped out in the twinking of an eye. "When he was killed was he lying on the couch in the position in which you found the body?"

"Judsing from the location of the wounds he must have been lying in some other position when he was struck."

TIFT OF HAIR.

Dr. Howland stated he found a tuft of hair on the couch. He was of the opinion that it was longer than Burdick's hair.

Dr. Howland stated that from the condition of the body he was of the opinion that Burdick was killed about two o'clock. This is regarded as important, as it would tend to nullify the statements made to the district attorney by Officers and Red regarding the "long womar."

made to the district attorney by Onicera Meyer and Reid regarding the "lone womary"

In reply to anotherquestion, an affirmative answer to which would have shown that a woman had been in the room, the dostor gave a wegative reply.

Replying to a question by one of the attorneys representing the Burdick family, the witness said his opinion was the blood found on the door was thrown from the instrument used in committing the murder.

Detective John W. Polmlund, who followed Dr. Howland on the stand, described the scene in the den and related the conterestion he had with one of the made. He found some letters and a revolver in Burdick's coat. The trousers, he said, were lying on the couch and looked as if they had been placed there caractily and folded over.

Mrs. Holl, the mather of Mrs. furdick, was the first witness at the afternoon session.

DOOR OPEN.

Mrs. Hull said that Burdick came into the dining room on Thursday evening, the night of the murder. He had a bottle in his hand. She did not know what it contained, nor did she see it again. She thought it strange that it
